How the Season Looks

"We're definitely improved over the last two seasons," says usually noncommittal Aggie Coach Warren Woodson. "We're in the same position as we were in 1959 when we were a year away from an undefeated season."

Spring football observers think Woodson and his assistants have brought to NMSU some of the finest players since the Aggies fielded an undefeated eleven in 1960.

None—least of all Woodson—has any illusions 1963 can bring an undefeated season. Local fans would happily settle for 1959's record of 7 wins, 3 losses in the regular season (NMSU also won in the Sun Bowl over North Texas State).

NMSU's position is definitely compromised by lack of depth in the line and the new substitution rule which, Woodson points out, "is exactly the opposite of the free substitution urged by the coaches."

This will hurt team performance, Woodson feels. In the face of it, he adds, "we will try to develop two nine-man units to go both ways. We will substitute two offensive for two defensive men as the rules permit on fourth down and when the ball changes hands."

NMSU is concerned about end positions, for which only three experienced men are available, and the tackles, which have four men. Things are slightly better at guard, in fair shape at center. In the backfield things take a brighter turn. Armando Alba is a seasoned if short quarterback on offense, Don Riersen seasoned and tough on defense. Behind them are promising junior college newcomer Rick Norman and Dale Bentley, who lettered as a freshman in 1962.

At left halfback—tailback in the Woodson Winged-T—is the twice-national champion rusher Jim "Preacher" Pilot, backed up by hustling Boyd Moses. Junior college newcomer Fred Opezzo won a starting slot at right half or wingback, and has good depth behind him. The Aggies also have two good fullback prospects in Joe Johnson, a sophomore who may top senior John Allen to start.

New Mexico State, despite lack of line depth, may be able to field the most talented starting line in years. It has good speed and good pursuit. It makes possible a strong running attack and strong defense against running.

Shaping his strategy around the players available, Woodson is expected to stress running in 1963 over the passing attack underlying the wide-open offense for which he is noted.

If spring training brought some regrets about players failing to meet expectations, it also brought encouragement over development of others.

"Right now I'd rate end Lee Sampson our top pro prospect," Woodson said after spring training. Sampson has matured greatly since the 1962 season, when he caught 21 passes for 283 yards. He's excellent on both offense and defense and has developed maneuverability. He's almost to Woodson specifications for an end—6 feet 3 inches, 215 pounds.

Tackle Willie Adams provides another bright spot—at 6 feet 3 inches and 230 pounds he excels on both offense and defense. He is a junior college newcomer from Cameron State of Oklahoma.

Joe Johnson in spring practice and the annual alumni game proved himself an excellent linebacker and a good ball-carrier, while returning squadman Stanley Johnson, a sophomore, bumped a letterman as the starting left guard.

The Aggies have 18 returning lettermen—10 of them in the backfield, and 10 returning squadmen. Eight junior college men and one from the service filled out the spring squad.

Gone from the 1962 team are 14 lettermen and four squadmen. Toughest losses were game Bobby Langford, a super-linebacker at a mere 160 pounds, left end Richard Ramirez, and right guard Owen Thomas.

New Mexico State definitely has problems with a limited squad and shallow depth with no leeway for misfortune. It also has some top talent and promising newcomers.

James 'Preacher' Pilot

This fall Jim Pilot will seek an unprecedented title—the first major-college football player in the country to lead the nation three years in a row in any major NCAA statistical department.

Preacher holds the NCAA's major college rushing title for the past two years—1,278 yards in 191 carries in 1961, 1,247 yards in 208 carries in 1962. He was the country's No. 1 scorer in 1961 with 138 points, tied for second in 1962 with 92 points. Even so he racked up the year's single-game high in scoring 30 points against North Texas State.

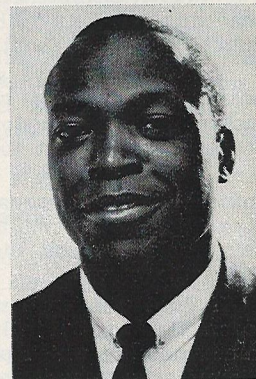

Jim gave New Mexico State an unprecedented fourth consecutive rushing title. His predecessors were Bob Gaiters in 1960 and Pervis Atkins in 1959. No other team has ever won as many as four titles in any one principal department—team or individual.

NCAA reports Pilot's two-year aggregate of 2,525 yards rushing is the third best figure ever posted among major college players. Only three others have toted the ball more times than the 399 carries he has run.

Preacher has his challenge cut out for him this fall. Five players have sought third-year crowns after winning two in a row. All have been unsuccessful. But Pilot has an advantage—he is the second man in the annals of major college football to win ball-carrying honors in back-to-back seasons. Art Luppino of Arizona, another Warren Woodson-coached back, was the first in 1954-55.

Robert Creamer of Sports Illustrated magazine describes Pilot this way: "He is 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighs 195 pounds, just about the size of Mickey Mantle. He has the same trim, blocky build that Mantle has and possibly as much speed. He was clocked at 9.8 in the 100-yard dash in high school. He has a deep, resonant voice, a fine, sharp wit, and extraordinary poise. He hopes to play pro football."

Pilot is frank about his ambitions to play pro football. "Certainly I hope to be drafted by a professional team," he says. "If I can make the grade, I'd like to play pro as long as my legs hold up." With a smile he adds that he already feels weariness in his legs sometimes after a tough game—but then seriously says he thinks his legs will hold up for many seasons.

When pro scouts began to talk to Pilot, he says he suddenly realized possibilities of playing pro ball were no dream. The sudden realization of a professional career changed his academic outlook: "When I first got out of high school I didn't really care about school."

This was reflected as recently as 1962 when Jim had to miss spring practice because of scholastic deficiencies. "It took a while for me to grow up," he admits. "I'm lucky because it was almost too late for me."

Preacher now feels he'll have no further academic difficulties and can graduate on time. "I need the degree," he says. "Some day I want to coach. I'd like nothing better than being able to coach high school in my old home town," in Kingsville, Tex.

If Pilot can teach some of his techniques, he'll be a top coach. He is noted in his ball-carrying for his willful, determined running which picks up extra yards after he's tackled. His offensive power overshadows his defensive ability—he's a sure tackler in the secondary, a hard-hitter in open field.

Creamer of Sports Illustrated, who saw Pilot play at West Texas State last fall, writes "... he showed his tremendous power when New Mexico State, trailing 20-6, fought desperately and successfully to get back in the game. From the 17-yard line he carried half the West Texas line with him as he forced his way to the 11."

Top Pro Prospects

Lee Sampson, a graceful, strong end at 6 feet 3 inches and 215 pounds, emerged from spring practice in NMSU Coach Warren Woodson's opinion as the Aggies' No. 1 prospect for professional football.

Always a hard worker and dedicated player, Samson this spring concentrated on developing movement and deception. Woodson believes Sampson has shown the greatest improvement of any player carried over from 1962. A senior this year, he's a sure starter at right end.

Sampson came to NMSU from service and junior college football at start of the 1962 season. He was the top pass catcher for the Aggies in 1962 with 21 receptions for 283 yards and one touchdown. Furthermore, he's a top-rated man on defense, another ability that has shown great improvement since 1962.

Willie Adams at right tackle has brought important strength to the Aggie line on both offense and defense. At 6 feet 3 inches and 228 pounds, he's agile and fast. As linebacker on defense, his lateral movement is quick and tackling sure.

Adams came to New Mexico State at start of the 1963 spring semester and will be a junior this fall. At Cameron State junior college in Lawton, Okla., he last year won Junior All-American honors. His play in the varsity-alumni spring game nailed down a starting berth for him at right tackle.

Most Promising Sophomores

Joe Johnson, all 5 feet 11 inches and 205 pounds of him, after spring practice appeared to have the edge over senior letterman John Allen as the starter at fullback. Johnson's hard-charging at the center of the line brings important versatility to the Aggie running game. He lettered as a freshman.

Julio Valdenegro, another 1962 Freshman who won a letter, is a 6 feet 3 inch guard with 245 pounds he can set in motion. He has tough competition, though, from—

Stanley Johnson, 5 feet 11 inches and 190 pounds, a squadman last year who in spring practice looked as though he'd be the starter at left guard for NMSU in 1963.

Earnest Johnson, another guard, 6 feet 1 inch, 200 pounds. He has excellent potential, although it wasn't realized in spring practice.

Eugene Modzelewski, a freshman letterman, No. 2 man at left tackle, a strong 6 feet 1 inch and 210 pounds. He's a member of the famed football-playing Modzelewskis from West Natrona, Pa.

Armando Alba, 1963 Captain

Armando Alba is NMSU's starting quarterback on offense, 1963 team captain (there are also three co-captains), and the Aggies' top passer.

Alba last year threw 101 passes, completed 37 for 605 yards. He threw four touchdown passes in what was primarily a running season for the Aggies. A senior, he is 5 feet 11 inches and 190 pounds.

Coach Warren Woodson

Roy Terrell of Sports Illustrated once summed up Aggie Coach Warren Woodson this way:

"No one ever accused Warren Woodson of turning out either a poor football team or an uninteresting one. His quarterbacks have firm instructions to pass at least twenty times a game, at least seven times in the first quarter. He will try almost anything once—and will try it again if it succeeds . . . Woodson's players respect him for his honesty and knowledge and skill and never-ending search for perfection."

Since that was written three years ago Woodson has changed things somewhat. He has long been noted for the 20-passes-a-game edict. But he has been even more noted as a man who fits his offense to the material available. That was the way he developed the Winged-T offense at Hardin-Simmons in 1941.

Last year New Mexico State ran 446 times in 10 games, passed 177 times—an average of 17.7 pass attempts per game, a slight decline from the 20-pass standard not worth quibbling about. Yet it is indicative of the flexibility in NMSU's Winged-T, which goes in for baffling spreads and power concentration over holes created by shifting line gaps. Originally designed to take advantage of a great passing-end combination, it has brought nine national rushing titles to players on Woodson-coached teams at Hardin-Simmons, Arizona, and New Mexico State.

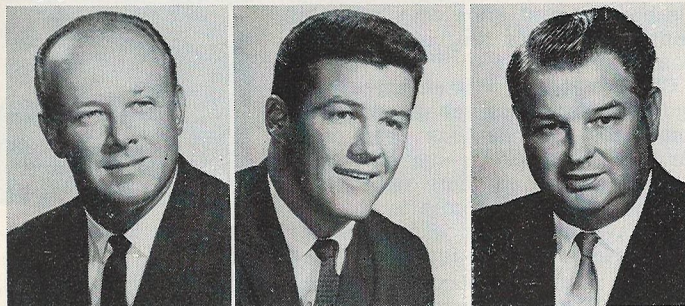

Entering his sixth season at NMSU, Woodson has a career record of 208 victories, 93 losses, 18 ties. In his 31 years of coaching he has known only five losing seasons. His team have made seven bowl appearances and never lost a one. In five years with New Mexico State he has built a record of 32-19-1.

In 1959 he was named to the Helms Athletic Foundation College Football Hall of Fame. In January 1961 Murray Warmath of Minnesota and Woodson were named "Coaches of the Year" by the American Coaches Assn. at its annual convention in Pittsburgh.

Coming to New Mexico State in February 1958, Woodson set about changing things. Despite a 4-6 season that first year, NMSU beat traditional rival Texas Western for the first time in 12 years. The following year NMSU beat upstate rival New Mexico for the first time in 22 years and posted its first winning season in 20 years. The build-up culminated in the undefeated season of 1960 when the Aggies won 11 straight and all kinds of honors for a brilliant backfield trio—Charley Johnson, Pervis Atkins, and Bob Gaiters.

Woodson does other things than coaching, though. As athletic director at NMSU he has fought through a spring sports program despite nip-and-tuck low budgets. He has a goal for intercollegiate athletics at New Mexico State that's simply stated—"We will be competitive."

Aggie Assistant Coaches

Tom Moulton, NMSU line coach, was the first assistant to be appointed by Coach Warren Woodson after Woodson came to New Mexico State in 1958. The head coach describes Moulton as "the best line coach I've ever had" in 31 years of coaching. A native of Oklahoma, he played football at Oklahoma State, which granted his degree in 1949.

Donnie Daye, in his second year with NMSU, wears three hats this season. He's Aggie defensive coach, freshman football coach, and NMSU student. He played under Paul Dietzel at Louisiana State, where he won a freshman and three varsity letters in football. He's completing his academic work at New Mexico State.

Paul Alley, end coach, joined the Aggie coaching staff in February 1960, after two successful years as line coach at Victoria High School in Texas. Also a native of Oklahoma, he played and earned his bachelor's degree at Southeastern Oklahoma and his master's at Oklahoma State.
